Hon. Digvijaya Singh
AICC General Secretary &
Trust Member

The Hindupat Institute of Teacher Training, our newest venture, was founded to improve the quality of teachers in India, especially in the rural areas. Our vision is to train teachers with global best practices through partnerships with global institutions and universities. In turn, the youth of tomorrow will receive the best education possible.

Dr. M.N. Bapat
Ex-Principal, HITT

One may assume that HITT is yet another shrub in the wild growth of mushrooming institutes. However, the vision of this institute is quite revolutionary in its ideology and approach. HITT is the brain child of a very enthusiastic, dedicated and foresighted person of eminence, the Hon. Digvijay Singh, Ex. CM of Madhya Pradesh. By virtue of his extensive experience as an administrator, he realized that economic growth and development should occur in every Indian village. He believed that such progress can be achieved through literacy and education at that grassroots level. I hope that HITT will be able to fulfill its vision and mission in the coming years.

Dr. Radhika Iyengar
Director, Teachers college,
Columbia University

Gandhiji once said "Education must be concrete and inter connected, not abstract or given in isolated sections". This "way of life" approach to education will once again be revived by the Hindupat Institute of Teacher Training. The Institute's philosophy of education is much needed to fill the current gaps in teacher education in India
